A Member of the State Bar. )

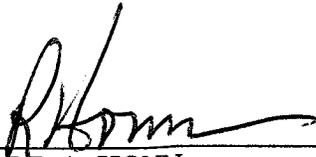

On April 17, 2013, respondent Mansfield Collins filed a motion for clarification of this court's prior order filed March 28, 2013. Respondent seeks to have his restitution payment made by check dated April 9, 2013, credited to the restitution payment due February 10, 2013, instead of the restitution payment that will be due January 2014. The Office of Probation filed a response indicating that it intended to apply the money paid to the restitution due in January 2014, but essentially taking no position on the merits of the request. The request to apply the April 2013 payment to the restitution due February 2013 is granted.

On May 2, 2013, respondent filed a further motion for modification of the terms of his probation to reduce the amount of the restitution owed or, alternatively, for early termination of the probation. The Office of Probation opposes the motion. Respondent's financial circumstances have not changed since his last request for modification. He has made comparatively minimal restitution payments despite earning substantial income. The court again concludes that respondent has failed to show that the requested modification is consistent with the protection of the public, his rehabilitation, and the maintenance of the integrity of the profession. (Rules Proc. of State Bar, rule 5.300.) No good cause having been shown, the motion for modification or early termination of the probation is denied.

IT IS SO ORDERED.
